How to Use Inspect Element Lee Stanton August 16, 2022 As more and more business is conducted on our phones, it becomes essential for us to be able to access the proper contacts and information needed to get our work done. However, if the mobile ecosystem you subscribe to doesn't match up with your company's email provider, things can get confusing. For iPhone users who work for an organization that relies on G Suite, it's actually pretty simple to port your Google account contacts to your smartphone. The process used to require third party apps to work smoothly, but there is now a built-in mechanism that makes it easy. SEE: BYOD (Bring Your Own Device) Policy Template (Tech Pro Research) Here's how you can sync your Google contacts with your iPhone. For starters, you'll obviously need to have a Google account. Before you attempt to sync the account, make sure you have your account name and password handy-you'll need them to complete the process. Begin by tapping on the Settings app (the one that looks like a silver cog and gear) on your iPhone. Once in the Settings app, scroll down a bit and tap on the "Contacts" option. On the Contacts page, tap the "Accounts" section at the very top of the page. On this page you will see all the email accounts you currently have set up on your phone. To add a new Google account, tap "Add Account" and, on the following page, tap "Google." At this point, you should be prompted to enter your username (usually your Gmail email address) and password. If you have enabled two-factor authentication, you will also need to follow prompts for that as well at this point. When you are done, tap "Next." When you are shown the account information, you will see which features are to be integrated. Make sure that "Contacts" has been tapped, and that the button has been selected with green behind it (see below). Once you have finished this step, tap "Save" if you are prompted to do so, and then exit the app. When you next open your iPhone's "Contacts" app, the sync should begin. If the sync does not occur as expected, Google recommends going back into your Settings to the Contacts page and making sure that "Contacts" is actually turned on. If it is, tap on the account name from the Contacts page, and the on option that says "Advanced." From there, switch on the "Use SSL" option, and then back out and hit "Done" on the account page. If all else fails, try removing and re-adding the account. 1 Open your device's Settings app. 2 Scroll down and tap Accounts. It's in the "Personal" section of the menu. Advertisement 3 Tap Google.[1] If you have not added your Google account to your Android device, tap + Add account, then tap Google and follow the on-screen prompts to add or create a new Google account. 4 Slide Contacts to the "On" position . Your Google Contacts will now sync with the contacts or address book app on your Android device. Advertisement Add New Question Question How can I backup the contacts on my phone? You save them to your internal or external storage by exporting them using the EXPORT TO STORAGE option from your Contacts settings. You can also import them any time you want by choosing IMPORT FROM STORAGE option, if your contacts get accidentally deleted. Question What do I do if I try to sync and get an error? Restart the app. Question I am trying to sync contacts between a Nexus 6 phone and a 2013 Nexus 7 tablet. I have followed the instructions but it is not syncing correctly. Any ideas as to why? In your settings you should be able to save your contacts on the Nexus 6 to a Gmail account or any account you're using. Then sign into your Google account on your 2013 Nexus 7 and all of your contacts should appear. You might have to go on to your Nexus 6 and go through each contact individually and make sure the contact is saved to your Google account before transferring them to your Nexus 7 tablet. "First how-to that actually told me what to do. The Android menus, etc. were a little out-of-date, but I could still follow it..." more Share your story Some contacts on your phone or tablet may not be saved as Google contacts. For example, some apps save contacts in device storage, which means they can only be managed on that device. Changes you make to these contacts don't sync across Google services or to other signed-in devices. If the device is ever lost or damaged, these contacts may be lost. To keep your contacts backed up and synced to all your devices, you can automatically save device contacts as Google contacts. Google contacts are available across Google services and can be managed on any signed-in device. If the original device is lost or damaged, the contacts can automatically sync to a new device when you sign in. These steps work only on Android. Back up & sync device contacts by saving them as Google contacts: On your Android phone or tablet, open the "Settings" app. Tap Google Settings for Google apps. Google Contacts sync. Also sync device contacts. Automatically back up & sync device contacts. Turn on Automatically back up & sync device contacts. Pick the account you'd like your contacts to be saved in. Your contacts can only be automatically saved to one Google Account. Tip: You can't back up contacts to a child's account or a G Suite account (one you use for work or school). Your existing device contacts and any future device contacts you add will be automatically saved as Google contacts and sync to your Google Account. When you sign out of a phone or tablet, all your Google contacts will be removed from that device to prevent other people who use that device from accessing them. Your Google contacts will remain in your Google Account and sync to a new device when you sign in. Tip: Depending on your device make and model you may not be able to automatically back up and sync device contacts. What about SIM contacts and contacts that sync with other cloud services? SIM contacts and contacts syncing with other cloud services (like Exchange, Yahoo, or others) cannot be automatically saved as Google contacts. Learn how to import contacts. Tip: To use device contacts across Google services without saving them as Google contacts, turn on Save contact info from your devices. That setting includes SIM contacts and contacts syncing with other cloud services, but you can only manage them on the original device. To back up device contacts without saving them as Google contacts, learn how to back up data on your Android device. Stop saving device contacts as Google contacts and move contacts out of your Google Account To stop automatically saving device contacts as Google contacts: On your Android phone or tablet, open the "Settings" app. Tap Google Settings for Google apps. Google Contacts sync. Also sync device contacts. Automatically back up & sync device contacts. Turn off Automatically back up & sync device contacts. Contacts that have already been saved as Google contacts will remain in your account unless you manually remove them. Something went wrong. Wait a moment and try again. Syncing your contacts Your contacts are automatically synced when you first turn on your phone and sign into a Google Account, so make sure to add your Google Account to your Android device. Any existing contacts from that account are synced with your device. After that, all your contacts automatically stay in sync, whether you make changes on your phone, from another device, or from any Web browser. The contact information on your device is also available in Gmail, Google Talk, Messenger, Phone, and other apps where it's useful. As you add contacts from different sources, they are synced automatically across all the places you need them. Since contacts are automatically synced, if you delete a Google contact from your device, it will also be deleted from Google Contacts, which will also remove it from other places, such as Google Chat. Importing Android contacts to Gmail Android contacts are automatically synced to your Gmail account, so there's no need to import them. You can find any contacts you've created on your device in your Gmail by following these steps: On your web version of Gmail, click Gmail on the left side of your Gmail page, then choose Contacts Click My contacts on the left side of the page If you've starred favorite contacts on your Android device, find them in your Gmail contacts by clicking Starred in Android under My contacts. Something went wrong. Wait a moment and try again. Innovation Tom Merritt shares TOP500's ranking of the best supercomputers this year.
